

8. Interim Removal of Cattle. In the event that upon inspection owner and/or consultant should find evidence of neglect or mismanagement on the part of feeder, owner shall be entitled to remove all of the cattle, feed inventory and medication which has been paid for by owner from the feeder's premises and renumerate feeder for all services provided to date of delivery to the date of removal. The signs of neglect shall include, but not be limited to, thin cattle, unattended cattle, empty feed bunks or waterers, empty mineral feeders, neglected bedding areas, failure to provide parasitic control or other recognized signs of neglect.

9. Inspection rights. Owner and/or consultant shall have the right to enter the feeder's facilities at any time and inspect the cattle.

10. Sales. The decision to sell the cattle shall be made in the sole discretion of the owner. The feeder and the consultant agree to advise, and assist the owner on the marketability of the cattle and the status of the market. This is not limited to the actual sale of the cattle, but to include marketing tools such as futures, options, and showing the cattle to potential buyers.

11. Insurance. Feeder shall notify insurance representative to furnish certificates of insurance to owner for liability insurance stating that at least $1,000,000 bodily injury and property damage is in effect. Feeder will have insurance covering lightning, fire, and other perils.

Feeder will be responsible for inventory losses from mysterious disappearance and will reimburse owner for each loss at a value equal to the average last weight of the cattle in the pen in question TIMES the current market value of cattle of said weight PLUS the average expense incurred per head since the previous computer report and that subsequent to the loss.

Death losses must be reported to the owner and insurance company within 24 hours of death or the loss will be considered the feeder's responsibility or mysterious disappearance.

Feeder shall, at his own expense and cost, procure and maintain insurance as required under the Workman's Compensation